The hospitality industry witnessed significant disruption from the COVID-19 pandemic. All indications are that the hotel industry will continue moving toward recovery in 2022, but a full recovery is still several years away. Large scale hotels to boutique hotels have responded to the new travelers who are increasingly likely to be leisure or bleisure travelers or digital nomads. As hospitality investors and developers look to expand thru construction or conversion opportunities, how have rising construction costs and supply chain issues changed their outlook? What are the opportunities and challenges for companies when it comes to expanding their footprint?
